The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

Guaranteed LOWEST Down Prices in THE COUNTRY

"We go the distance for you."

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

A Movie Starring Burt Reynolds And Sally Field That Got 2 Thumbs Down

By Dan Rattiner

Every spring and fall, this newspaper holds a ten week film festival called THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL FALL 2001. We've been doing this for seven years. We get cassette tapes. We find a theater space to show them in. We invite people to show up. We do this for free.

Many well known movies have been made here, or have had scenes in them from here. Woody Allen made INTERIORS in Southampton. Alan Alda made SWEET LIBERTY in Sag Harbor. Many years ago, Rudolph Valentino made THE SHEIK in Montauk. We show a film every Saturday at 2 p.m., ten weeks in the spring and ten weeks in the fall. For the last few years the films have been shown in the Ross School Library in East Hampton. They have been very kind to let us use the space.

Anyway, it has always been important for us to make sure we only get as many people as we have seats. The theaters where we show have limited capacities. And so we ask in our advertising that if you wish to attend a film, call Dan's Papers at 537-0500 to make a reservation. Our operators get the name and the phone number and put it on the sign-up sheet. It's first come, first served. When all the seats are gone, we are "sold out." Sorry. Try the film next week.

Yesterday, I happened by the front desk — we have a new person working there — and I asked to see how things were going for this coming week. Three weeks ago, MASQUERADE had been a sell out. What I saw on the sheet was that CLOSED FOR THANKSGIVING, noted for November 24, had fifteen reservations so far.

Here is what the schedule reads.

November 17 - RAGING BULL
November 24 - CLOSED FOR THANKSGIVING
December 1 - SABRINA
December 8 - COMPROMISING POSITIONS
December 15 - AGE OF INNOCENCE

You may be familiar with the plots of some of these movies. But I would bet there is not one person, not even among the fifteen who reserved tickets for CLOSED FOR THANKSGIVING, who can tell me the plot. So I am going to tell you the plot.

CLOSED FOR THANKSGIVING, made in 1977, stars Burt Reynolds and Sally Field. The plot involves a group of Soviet commandos who land on the roof of a skyscraper...

CLOSED FOR THANKSGIVING was made in 1977 and stars Burt Reynolds and Sally Field, who are, in this movie, husband and wife. It was the first movie Ms. Field made after her final "Flying Nun" movie.

The plot involves a group of Soviet commandos who land on the roof of a just-completed skyscraper in downtown Philadelphia on Thanksgiving Day in order to seize a famous American nuclear scientist who is there. They intend to hold him hostage inside the building until the American government agrees to release a Soviet scientist held in jail in Washington.

The famous American nuclear scientist, played by Henry Fonda, is in the building because he

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

The hottest movie in town is (you already know)...Harry Potter. This is a must see for the kids and kids at heart. How about something for the adults? Hamptonites Billy Joel, Paul McCartney and Mick Jagger (who has been visiting out here on and off for 30 years) have new music for the Christmas stocking. Bill's classical album, "Billy Joel: Fantasies & Delusions, Op. 1-10," is number 1 on the classical music charts. Paul has his introspective "Driving Rain" and Mick came out with a hidden side of his musical talent with a solo album "Goddess In The Doorway." It's only rock and roll...but we like it.

For some local listening, we can recommend our favorites on CD... the Loan Sharks and Jim Turner.

Russell Simmons, Hampton homeowner and founder of Def Records, has been the man about town (East and West Coast) with beautiful bride Kimora Lee Simmons. Showing up at Sotheby's for the Creative Coalition Dinner and sitting ringside at the showing of the spring line of Tommy Hilfiger's new 2002 Spring line. We do admit he will always look good with Kimora at his side regardless of what he wears.

Well, this is a sign that life does go on after a divorce. Kim Basinger (Amagansett) was playing his mother in upcoming movie based on Eminem's (super rap star) life and was playing his girlfriend after the day of shooting was completed. The age difference (she is 47 and he is 29) did not matter and when you look like Kim...who cares?

What could the President's daughter, Barbara Bush, have in common with Southampton's Paris Hilton? It's going to be the clothes they wear. Young Bush put in an order for all the pieces from the very unladylike line of Heatherette. Paris is known for her hot and hip look in fashion, but we want to know where Barbara can wear her new glittered and torn tee shirt? Perhaps at a State Dinner her father will be hosting?

Paris Hilton also seems to not mind spending a small fortune on that special little cocktail dress. At the opening of the Palms Casino (Las Vegas) her dress was made up of $1 million worth of poker chips. Makes you wonder when she plays cards does she just pluck one off and where does she remove it from?

More fashion news from Donna Karan and Ralph Lauren. It seems they struck gold this fall season with their collections. Donna said she went back to is part of an amateur theater group performing there for disadvantaged children. The theater is on the ground floor of this sixty story building. The children are watching the play, after which they will get a Thanksgiving dinner. And the commandos are coming down in the elevator.

The play in performance is called CLOTHES FOR THANKSGIVING and it is set in 1621, one year after the Pilgrims landed in Plymouth. Henry Fonda and Sally Field are married Pilgrims in this play, and they are hosting the first big Thanksgiving dinner for the Indians, who have brought corn and pumpkin pie with cloves. It's a cold afternoon, and the climax of the play is when the Indians present the Pilgrims with Cloves for Thanksgiving — the Pilgrims have never seen cloves before, and the Pilgrims take off their coats and wrap them around the shoulders of the lightly clad Native Americans in a show of warmth and friendship. CLOTHES FOR THANKSGIVING. It is a nice play.

The commandos knock off the security people guarding the front of this skyscraper, put their own men there and post a sign that reads CLOSED FOR TANKSGIVING on the revolving door that leads into the front lobby. They spell it TANKSGIVING because, being Russians, they don't know how to spell THANKSGIVING and that's one of the giveaways that something is wrong inside. It is also one of those literary things, you know, THANKSGIVING, TANKSGIVING. Get it? TANKS?

Anyway, the commandos break into the theater performance, stop the play, bundle off Henry Fonda to their penthouse lair, and in the confusion as the children and adults run around screaming, Sally Field gets on her cell phone and places a hysterical call to her husband, Burt Reynolds, telling him to please come and save her.

They didn't have cell phones then? Well, yes they did, for this one movie they did. Then they went away and they didn't come back for another ten years. That's the truth.

What you are probably thinking here is that this movie sounds very much like the movie DIE HARD starring Bruce Willis and you are right about that because, after CLOSED FOR THANKSGIVING came out and completely flopped, some new writers got hold of the script and re-worked it into DIE HARD. To put it another way, they stole the plot.

Why CLOSED FOR THANKSGIVING didn't work, of course, was that everybody was just plain mis-cast. Burt Reynolds is scaling the side of the building, giggling and laughing, above the inept police who have the building surrounded down below. Sally Field is scolding and lecturing the chief commando, played by Rick Moranis. They are both very short. I mean, it just doesn't work.

The scene that takes place on the East End is on the beach in front of the Montauk Lighthouse, where a surf fisherman in waders looks up and sees this helicopter, with the red flag of the Soviet Union painted on the side, fly over. He scratches his head. This scene lasts two and a half seconds.

Siskel and Ebert gave this film two thumbs down.

So what we had to do, of course, was to phone all these people who called in to reserve seats for CLOSED FOR THANKSGIVING and let them know the performance was being cancelled for technical reasons. We also had to tell all new callers the same thing. CLOSED FOR

Phonies

Will The Real Spielberg, Bacall, De Niro and Manuella Please Stand Up?

By Dan Rattiner

A man pretending to be Robert De Niro was arrested at a hotel in upstate New York last week. De Niro had learned of this man's activities, hired a private detective and orchestrated a "sting" operation at the Holiday Inn in Middletown. There, police arrested Joe Manuella, 51, who looks and acts exactly like De Niro, and who arrived at the hotel with credit cards and identification in the name of De Niro with plans to have a good time and get paid doing it. (More about this later.) He had done this before.

Many of the celebrities who come to the Hamptons have been plagued by look-alikes. It has happened to Steven Spielberg; it has happened to Jerry Seinfeld. This past summer, it turned out, Joe Manuella used the fake De Niro credit card to get a discount at one of our high-priced bed and breakfasts in East Hampton — De Niro's family has a house in Montauk — then used the bed and breakfast connection to get a window table during prime time at one of our tony restaurants, charging the tip to Mr. De Niro as well. He also squired around a lot of women.

"Excuse me, are you Robert De Niro?"

What a great way to meet girls.

Of course, it helps to look exactly like the person you are impersonating, and that, of course, is in the genes. From there it can develop in a legitimate way where you become a double for the celebrity, or get paid to do impersonations of the celebrity at a comedy club, but then it is just a short leap to fraud.

Of course, it helps to look exactly like the person you are impersonating. "Excuse me, are you Robert De Niro?" "Of course. And who are you?" What a great way to meet girls.

The blond comes over. "Excuse me, are you Robert De Niro?"

"Of course. And who are you?"

There are at least three different perspectives that you can view this from. The first is from the view of the poor lug from New Jersey, which Mr. Manuella is, who recently retired from the fire department, which Mr. Manuella did, and who finds there are many advantages to being Robert De Niro.

The second perspective is the hotel, restaurant, fundraiser or event that would like to have Robert De Niro in attendance. Can't we get Robert De Niro? Awww gee. Most people are honest, but there are others who will pass fake diamonds for real in any society. And so the item appears in the gossip pages.

"Fireman Joe Maneulla from Glen Rock, New Jersey made a special appearance at the Save the Storks Fundraiser at the Ocean Club in Quogue the other night."

You can see how that would not work. But Robert De Niro would.

Which leads me to the third perspective, which is the perspective of Robert De Niro or one of the other celebrities.

Because the Hamptons are filled with celebrities and because there are at least four charity events every weekend in the summertime, and because I run the local paper, I can tell you that being a celebrity in the Hamptons must be a massive undertaking. Personally, though I am only a newspaper publisher, I get buried under tons of invitations. They are all good causes and I would like to go. But it is not possible to do so. And so I can only imagine what it is like for a celebrity out here. The phone

THANKSGIVING was not going to happen.

But there ARE movies you can see as the 2001 autumn sequence of this film festival winds down. Harrison Ford and Julia Ormond star in SABRINA on December 1. Susan Sarandon and Raul Julia star in COMPROMISING POSITIONS on December 8. Michelle Pfeiffer and Daniel Day-Lewis star in AGE OF INNOCENCE on December 15. All films are screened in the Ross School Library in the first building on the right on Goodfriend Drive, at 2 p.m.

The films are previewed by Guy de Fraumeni, the producer/writer/director of award-winning European films and network TV shows, who serves as host for the festival. His co-host is Sarah Halsey.

Call 631-537-0500 to make reservations. But don't call the office on Thanksgiving. We're closed. • calls, invitations, requests for appearances, letters requesting replies — it must be staggering. And yet, to a very great degree, the A- List people can be seen all over the place every weekend in the summertime. Their photographs are taken and repeatedly appear in the pages of this newspaper.

How do they do it? I know I can't do it and still have a life. And so I am beginning to wonder if who we are seeing all over the Hamptons in the summertime are the look-alikes, some with the celeb's blessing, some without the celeb's blessing. And what has gone on here with Robert De Niro is a look alike who has just gone haywire.

De Niro sends out the bounty hunter to track him down.

Manuella, who had been expecting a check for $1,500 for gracing the Holiday Inn that night ("look Agnes, there's Robert De Niro!") was instead approached by police detective Andrew Werner in the front lobby. Werner snapped the handcuffs on him.

"What's dis all about?" Manuella said, in that deep gravelly, familiar voice.

A reporter for The New York Daily News, covering this story, asked Werner if that was all De Niro said.

"That's all he said," Werner said. "Then he clammed up."

You don't suppose that really WAS Robert De Niro! Nah.

You don't suppose there is not a single celebrity in the Hamptons, that perhaps all the Brinkleys and Spielbergs and Bacalls and Billy Joels are just the look alikes, hired by Marina Van and Tim Behringer, the presidents of the East Hampton and Southampton Chambers of Commerce with the blessing of the real celebrities, who don't have the time to be here but want to say they were?

Nah. •

The Beach In November, Sunbathing, Surfcasting, Media Showers And Surfing

By Dan Rattiner

You had to get up at four o'clock in the morning last Saturday, but from Montauk to Westhampton thousands of people did, and they got in their cars and drove down to the ocean to watch the meteor shower at that hour. The night sky was clear. It was an absolutely incredible show. Almost like a Fourth of July fireworks display, but with the volume on mute and the show lasting for three hours.

How astronomers know that a group of meteors is coming, will be arriving at exactly a certain time, and will not be large enough, any of them, to get through the atmosphere and clonk anybody on the head, is an amazing thing to me.

It also is a reminder of how connected we are to the unpredicability of life. We get a heads up that something small but spectacular is coming. Some meteors burning up in the atmosphere. But we might also get a heads up someday that something large and devastating is coming. Everybody hold hands, say your goodbyes. The odds of this, the astronomers tell us, are so small and unlikely that we should just go about our business as they do, not worrying about it. Okay.

But there is something else going on at the beach. And the crowds are out enjoying it more than they ever have before. It is the surfcasting. There are literally thousands of people with SUVs, jeeps and fishing rods on every beach, every day, all day. And we can thank General Electric, The State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) and global warming.

We can thank global warming because, during the months of October and November, we have had about fifteen "beach" days. As I write this, the temperature is 61 degrees.

We can thank global warming, first of all, because in the months of October and November, we have had about fifteen "beach" days. It has been incredible. As I write this on my laptop, November 19, sitting in a chair at Wyborg's Beach in East Hampton in the sunshine, the temperature is 61 degrees. It is headed up to 67. You can get a tan on this kind of day. Since the beginning of autumn, we have had nearly a dozen days on which you could go out and sun yourself on the beach. Or, alternately, go out and surfcast. Two of these days, at the beginning of November (!), got into the seventies. Records for high temperatures are being broken. This is a perk from global warming.

As for General Electric, we can thank them because, back in the 1950s and 1960s, they had the audacity, on the Hudson River in upstate New York, to unload thousands of tons of highly toxic and possibly carcinogenic chemicals, the most notable of which was PCB, into outfall tubes and into the Hudson River. Then, in the 1970s, and we can thank the DEC for this, the problem was uncovered with the shocking discovery of PCBs in large amounts in our striped bass — the fish were eating the stuff — and they banned bass fishing all up and down the Hudson, down through the narrows into the Atlantic Ocean and up and around into Long Island Sound. The ban lasted all through the 1980s — and the fish reproduced and reproduced — and into the 1990s when catches were tightly regulated. It has only been in the last five years that the regulations have been eased and the fishermen have been able to catch striped bass, and also bluefish, in abundance because the fishery has been so restored. Boy, has it been restored.

And so what we have been getting almost every day in October and November is this great melee of sunshine, baitfish, birds, bluefish, stripers, surfcasters, jeeps and SUVs out on the beach every day. I have never, ever seen anything like it. And if you stay inland, at home or downtown on Main Street all day, you would never know it.

Last Tuesday, it was so bad, or good, out on Sagg Main Beach, that I actually feared for the safety of three surfers who were out there in wetsuits waiting for a wave in the middle of it. A thousand birds were circling excitedly around. The fish were leaping out of the water. And the surfers were just looking in at the frenzy of surfcasters reeling in fish after fish. Hey dude, what's up?

Many of the fish caught that day, and many other days, were being thrown back. The fishermen, wearing gloves, would use a pliers and either cut out the hooks from the mouths of the flopping fish or if they couldn't cut them out just snip them off, and then they would throw them back. Cocktail blues is what they said were running. Good if smoked. Small. Nice tasting. But not worth taking home if you could catch much larger ones. There had to be a whole lot of traumatized fish swimming around afterwards that day.

As for global warming, the amount of greenhouse stuff we are throwing into the atmosphere every day is horrific and the temperature of the world is rising and the polar ice caps are melting. Pretty soon everything will be underwater.

For now, however, so far, so good. It has been quite an autumn at the beach. •

Another Farm Closes

New Law Sends Oldest Farm In The Hamptons Into The Dustbin Next Month

By Dan Rattiner

It has taken two years, but the Village of Southampton has finally won the battle against a celebrated international artist who dared to save a little farm in Southampton Village five years ago. You might have thought there is an ongoing attempt to protect our existing farms, but apparently restoring an abandoned farm in Southampton Village is right up there with creating hog rendering factories, refineries and slaughterhouses as activities that should not be allowed there. Farms? They disrupt the neighborhood. The animals quack and moo. And think of the impression this might make on our summer visitors.

Visitors might think that Southampton is a land of, well, farms. Wait a minute. Isn't this the oldest farm in Southampton?

To legally defeat the little farm of Gines Serran-Pagan, who came from Spain six years ago and proceeded to restore the place to its original use, was an act of legal brilliance by the Mayor of the Village, Joe Romanosky. Enforcing the original ordinances of the town against Serran-Pagan didn't work because what they say is that you CAN have farm animals in the Village of Southampton. But heaven knows the Mayor tried. He sent ordinance officials, policemen and other Village employees onto the property to issue summonses. But a local judge subsequently threw out all the charges.

"The reason the Mayor would not give up," Audrey Koehler, an immediate neighbor of Serran-Pagan said, "was because he could not say no to his father-in-law. There is absolutely no reason Mr. Serran-Pagan's farm animals could not be on his property. If the farm bothered anybody, we would know. We live next door."

If the Koehlers live to the south of the one acre farm, the father-in-law lives directly to the north of Serran-Pagan. An occasional chicken would get onto the father in law's property. And the father in law, who gardens and mows right down to the last blade of grass — see the place for yourself — wanted Serran-Pagan out.

Gines Serran-Pagan and friends

And so, since the existing laws did not work, the Mayor made a new law that would. He hired very good lawyers. The new law, which went into effect on September 19, says having farm animals on small parcels of land in Southampton Village is illegal. On the other hand, you could apply for and maybe get a permit to be exempt from the law for a period of one year. But probably not if your name is Gines Serran-Pagan.

Nevertheless, Gines Serran-Pagan briefly did think of applying for an exemption. But then he thought better of it. It would be a waste of time. Instead, he hired an attorney and in late September the attorney filed a notice of claim against the Village of Southampton that sometime during the next year there could be a lawsuit against them from Serran-Pagan. Then, last Friday, in anticipation of this lawsuit, the lawyers held a municipal hearing in Village Hall, also required by law before filing a lawsuit against a municipality, so that those responsible in the Village, the Mayor and the Village Council, could ask questions of Gines Serran-Pagan to see what his problem was. His problem was harassment, deprivation of his constitutional rights —because the new law was directed precisely and only against him — and abuse of power by his neighbor's son in law, the Mayor.

What happens next? Three things. The first thing is the creation of the SERRAN-PAGAN FARM SEARCH COMMITTEE. That happens with the publication of this issue. We invite anyone who owns a farm or a piece of a farm outside the Village of Southampton that they would like to part with to contact this committee and the committee will forward that information to Gines Serran-Pagan so he can look into buying it. Call the S-PFSC at 631-537-0500 and ask for Dan Rattiner. Or fill out the coupon at the end of this article and send it to The Serran-Pagan Farm Search Committee, c/o Dan's Papers, Box 630, Bridgehampton, New York 11932. The S-PFSC is a non- profit committee that will charge no fee and will present their findings to Mr. Serran-Pagan as a public service.

The second thing that will happen, on December 19, five weeks from now, will be the slaughter of the animals or the parade of the animals, depending on whether or not Serran-Pagan can find a home, temporary or permanent, for his geese, ducks and chickens to parade to by that date. December 19 is ninety days from when the new ordinance was passed. On that date it goes into effect. And the existing, pre-ordinance animals cannot be grand-fathered in. So on December 19, they have to go.

"The real losers in all of this," Serran-Pagan says, "are the children of Southampton. Schools from all over have brought their school age children here, to see the animals, to feed and learn about them, and to see all the paintings and work going on in all the barns.

"Another loser is the heritage of this town. I have fixed up these barns and outbuildings. This was the first farm in the Village of Southampton. This barn is the oldest barn still standing in the Village. It was built here in the eighteenth century. How can you have a farm without farm animals? Come and see the old farmhouse while there is time. It is open to all."

Anyone who wants to is welcome to come to the Red Barn Atelier, at 88 North Main Street, just a short walk from Main Street. It is Mr. Serran-Pagan's private home. And it is also his working art studio, his art gallery, his friends and family, his farm and his lifestyle. It reminds him, now that he has finished restoring it, of the farm where he grew up in Andelusia, he says. But it reminds me of a brick and cobblestone hacienda you might see in Spain, with huge beamed open interior spaces, a book-lined library, stone archways and a central courtyard with a working, bubbling fountain. Also barns with animals. Call 287-3747 and see for yourself.

The third thing that will happen is the lawsuit. It is the fervent hope of this newspaper that a new property can be found for Mr. Serran-Pagan somewhere else in the Hamptons, in Shinnecock, North Sea, Water Mill, Bridgehampton, or Sagaponack, anywhere that is not next door to the father-in-law of the Mayor where what Serran-Pagan does can be appreciated rather than attacked. Serran-Pagan wants to continue to live in the area. We also hope the lawsuit can be settled for an amount exactly equal to the monies that Serran-Pagan will have to spend to leave his old place, make the move and fix up his new place.

He does not deserve to be treated as he has. And everyone in the Village is the poorer for his being forced out in this way. He is being driven from his home, and in his place is an ordinance — in a rural community — against farm animals. Besides all that, there is now a very compelling lawsuit against the Village for the violation of Serran-Pagan's civil rights. The people of the Village should deal with this Mayor at the ballot box on the occasion of his next run for office. •

Sim Osama, Anthrax Gear And Pakistan's Nuclear Holiday

By Jerry Cimisi

"The bottom line is, how long can you hold your breath?"

The man who sold gas masks and various biological hazard gear told me this over the phone. I had seen his ad in The New York Times. Actually, there had been a few ads in the Times. First there was the display ad, with the attention-grabbing headline, "Anthrax Protection," which depicted a man wearing a "Chemical/Biological Hood."

"The double filter system will provide up to six hours protection from Nuclear, Biological and Chemical agents...twice as effective as the standard military equipment," the ad said. "It even permits a tight seal for beard and eyeglass wearers. This new product is manufactured in the USA."

There were three ways to order: e-mail, fax and via their website.

On the same page there were other, smaller classified ads: "Gas Mask/Chem Suits/Gloves"; "Smoke Masks for Sale, Protect Yourself"; "New Gas Masks for Sale, NATO Spec."

One company, when reached by phone, curiously did not want the publicity of having its name in a newspaper article (an ad for the same company, afterall, had run in the Times). The gentleman on the other end of affirmed that sales had been brisk.

"We're selling self-reliance. What if you're in a traffic jam, and a terrorist with a car loaded with some lethal biological agent crashes into another car?" That's when he made the remark about holding one's breath.

There is a quote from a member of Pakistan's military, Fazur Rahman Khalil: "God has ordered us to make nuclear weapons."

Code name: Sim Osama.

As this is going to press, Osama bin Laden is on the run. He may be captured, he may be shot, he may disappear across some border and emerge to threaten us again. If he remains on the run the cutting edge of virtual technology will try to rein him in.

Put it this way: Osama bin Laden, leader of the jihad, is now part of a very sophisticated video game. Within some computer laboratory at the naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, California, a collection of virtual eggheads have been putting together a computer simulation of bin Laden's terrorist network.

Within the wasteland of electronic data, landscape and communication networks, the ebb and flow of terrorists groups are plotted — or at least predicted – as well as the actions and reactions of the victims of the terrorists. This is all part of a new discipline called "agent technology." Information and a myriad of possibilities are fed into various computer programs and predictions on how such terrorists will act will emerge, it is hoped, as to how to combat such destructiveness.

This serious attempt to reduce the jihad to bytes and bits bears no little resemblance to a current computer game called "The Sims," a game in which the player can create his or her own digital world. And not merely a world, but characters, with traits and flaws and goals.

In other words, the Naval laboratory is trying to create its own "Sim Osama."

The lab that is doing this within the Naval Postgraduate School is called the Modeling, Virtual Environments and Simulation Institute. It is working in conjunction with the Defense Modeling and Simulation Office in Virginia and the U.S. Army's Simulation, Training and Instrumentation Command in Orlando, Florida.

The leader of this effort in the Monterey lab is Michael Zyda. Almost as soon as he received the news about the attacks of September 11, he thought: How could terrorism be modeled?

In a typical simulation, hundreds of red and blue dots cross a large grid, which represents a foreign landscape. One set of dots tries to devise an attack plan to gain the stronghold of the other dots. The scenario is played out again and again, each scenario following a slightly different course, like a series of alternate universes from a science fiction story.

These simulations are trying to improve the limits of older (if fairly recent) simulations. For instance, in one a sniper shoots at adversaries from a single position. The sniper might adjust his actions depending on the nature of the enemy's advance, but the sniper always remained a sniper. Zyda's work did have a boost from the already existing GI Agent Editor, the creation of Army Captain Joel Pawloski. He had formulated a ninety-four person attack force with nine snipers. In the program individual traits are set for all the soldiers. The question was, what was the most successful method of attack and defense? In over 160 runs of GI Agent Editor, it was found that the squad with the snipers had a higher success rate when the snipers were divided into smaller rather than larger units, communicating information on their targets and enemy positions rapidly to a troop leader.

With similar simulations, the military hopes to plan more effective assaults on wilderness strongholds of the likes of the Al Qaeda. The simulations will try to reproduce not just hypothetical but actual, potential terrains of conflict.

In the near future, these simulations may be expanded to include virtual studies on racism towards different groups, immigration patterns and terrorist penetration of airports. Globally, the simulations can be used to weigh and predict the nature of national alliances (and support of terrorists) among such question mark countries as Sudan, Jordan and Iraq, and the mix and inclinations of the various populations in those countries.

A virtual Middle East simulation program has been created by Professor Ian Lustick of the University of Pennsylvania, who said he thinks of terrorism in terms of popcorn: there will always be a few kernels about to pop." The question Lustick's simulations tries to resolve is how bad do conditions have to be, or, more precisely, under what conditions will certain groups in such countries support or become terrorists. The preliminary results of his program show that when the country or a core group in the country perceive that the many share a common concern but sees outside forces as opposed to that concern, violence will often be extended outside the group's borders.

Of course, the virtual world may mirror real life, but fall far short of real life itself. In one of the GI Agent Editor scenarios, it was discovered that when the leader of a troop was "killed," the rest of the troop was in disarray and scattered to hide. What happened was that, like all good soldiers, they were programmed to follow their leaders; without a leader they did not know what to do. In real life, a chain of command would be passed down to the next highest in rank.

The program was adjusted. An easy adjustment to make. But, in terms of real life, what program could have predicted September 11 and anthrax in the mail?

Imagine if the United States had a national holiday to celebrate the first explosion of its atomic arsenal. Well, our new ally Pakistan has just such a holiday.

In America's War on Terrorism, President Bush has assiduously courted Pakistan, a country we have had serious doubts about since they exploded their first nuclear weapon in 1998. Not only had

Eli Wallach
Actor

By Nick de Sève

I am as strong as a lion...
I am as strong as a lion and as soft as silk.
I wonder why the world is not a beautiful place...
I hear the birds chirp. I see the lions roar.
I want the world to be a better place.
I am as strong as a lion and as soft as silk.
I pretend that I'm asleep when I am scared.
I feel the cool breeze flow through my hair.
I touch the warmth of the sun. I worry that Terrible things will go on.
I cry when bad things happen.
I am as strong as a lion and as soft as silk.
I say I am an athlete. I dream I am an athlete.
I try to make my family's life better.
I hope I can make a difference in this world.
I am as strong as a lion and as soft as silk.

–Tyler Wallach, age twelve.

Eli Wallach was so taken by the poem above, written by his grandson, that he made sure they read it together, recently, for a taping of an upcoming special entitled: "In Our City: New Yorkers Remember September 11." Several survivors of the WTC disaster and family members of some of those who did not survive joined them. These "ordinary people" read poetry that they had composed to remember, to mourn, and to help them to go forward. Eli appeared with other prominent public figures brought together for the show by Dr. Richard Firestones's "White Box Productions" including Walter Cronkite, Caroline Kennedy, Sigourney Weaver, Frank McCourt, Fran Lebowitz and Public Schools Chancellor Harold Levy. All read a favorite poem, or an excerpt from a work of fiction, an essay, or a speech that has served each as a source of inspiration during trying times. The program's concept is simple and direct. It features New Yorkers from all walks of life eloquently demonstrating their resiliency, hope, compassion, fortitude and defiance through the music of poetry, and the beautiful words of great American writers such as Ernest Hemingway, E. B. White, Walt Whitman and Maya Angelou.

I caught up with Mr. Wallach on the set of "In Our City..." and I took the opportunity to share his observations on his grandson's poem in particular and current events in general. One of America's most recognizable and respected performers in films, on stage, and in television for over half a century, he is, of course, half of one of the more famous marriages in the entertainment world. His wife, Anne Jackson, recently wrapped up her starring role as Aurelia in Giraudoux's The Madwoman of Chaillot in a limited run at the Neighborhood Playhouse in Manhattan.

A warm and engaging man, a practiced conversationalist and storyteller, this screen legend has the knack of making anyone feel comfortably at home in a matter of minutes. At turns passionate and reflective in his observations, it was easy to understand his reputation as an intensely caring individual never less than fully committed to his opinions and ideas. Despite the fact that he is pushing eighty-six with white hair and a goatee, there remains that unmistakable wet gravelly voice and the mischievous and knowing gleam in those sharp eyes. And I'm damned if I don't occasionally catch a glimpse of Calvera, the cunning bandito leader in The Magnificent Seven, or the affable but extremely treacherous Tuco from The Good, the Bad and the Ugly.

Eli Wallach and Gene Hackman in 1977 on the set of The Domino Principle.

For over thirty-five years the native New Yorker, who was born in Brooklyn, and his wife have split their time on the East Coast by commuting between their Riverside Drive apartment overlooking the Hudson and their beautiful 130 year old wood-shingled summer house off Lily Pond Lane. They both confess to a long-standing love affair with East Hampton and for years before buying their present house they would rent a tiny cottage up on Three Mile Harbor Road. "I was in London when my agent called me and said I had to buy this place; being an actor I felt I'd always live a gypsy existence and had doubts about putting down roots anywhere. However, we both loved it out here so much that we made the decision, and we haven't regretted it for a minute."Eli and Anne have their close-knit, extended family out to the house in East Hampton as often as possible. Their three children, Roberta, Katherine and Peter (Tyler's dad), are all very involved with their own lives in the arts.

Mr. Wallach explained why his grandson felt compelled to write about the tragedy — as, indeed, many children have done throughout the country — and how much of our present reality can any child be expected to grasp. "In times like these I think it's very important for children to get some sort of release, you see it in their drawings...one of the kids had a picture of the Statue of Liberty crying...psychologically it's very valuable to them to be able to express their feelings. Their fears are very strong because they see that the adults don't seem to be able to handle it and they're not prepared in any way to take over and help... they just feel very vulnerable and that's a feeling that runs right through the poem."

The conversation quickly turned toward the topic on everyone's mind today, the nature of the war itself and the way that it is being waged. He feels very strongly about the need to ferret out and destroy all of the terrorists involved, throughout the entire Middle East, but he has reservations with the way the war has been prosecuted so far. "Lockheed-Martin gets a deal from the government for $200 billion, right? And Bush is talking about billions more for missile defense, and we go in and wipe out the six plane air force of the Taliban in five minutes, and still we can't accomplish all that much. So you ask yourself why, while we're engaged in this very costly war are we still paying off big companies billions...its dreadful." He foresees a much longer, much more difficult solution in dealing with the specter of international terrorism. "Look, insanity, evil and hatred are not just local commodities of bin Laden and the Taliban. They exist in Northern Ireland, they exist in Somalia, Peru and Chile, they exist all over." In the long run, he envisions a possible variation of the postwar Marshall Plan, which rebuilt Germany and Japan from the ground up. "We were smart enough to make them functioning countries again." As a way of, eventually, "restoring the dignity of people who feel lesser than we, who resent our success, and the liberties that we have, and we have to work out some scheme...where we help them rebuild."

He realted his impressions of the spirit of generosity and patriotism that has enveloped the nation in the past six weeks, and how it compared to similar periods that he has lived through in the past. "I've been through all the major crises in our times, Pearl Harbor, coincidentally his birthday is December 7, the war itself and, later on, the McCarthy era and then the Kennedy Assassination. I think that what your seeing today is a healthy reaction and it often happens in this country during episodes like this."

Does the reaction surprise him given all the recent debate over a present day American society that has been labeled trivial and weak-willed? "No, no, not at all. During times like these Americans tend to come together...they allow the ladies to get on the bus first; men walk on the outside on the sidewalk to protect the women. All of that is normal, natural and good. Unfortunately...it begins to wear off after awhile."

Moving on to his profession, he discussed his thoughts about the nature of celebrity in America and how that might undergo a sort of sea change as a result of the attacks. Specifically, did he thing that actors might rethink their roles as public figures and perhaps be less inclined to use their celebrity as a "bully pulpit" for their own particular purposes. "Well the fact that I'm in the arts doesn't mean I'm a second class citizen. Look, Charlton Heston has his 'bully pulpit,' Paul Newman uses his in other ways. Paul Newman has opened five camps for kids who have cancer and that's his approach to using celebrity...one's talking about guns, the other's talking about saving kids. No, I think actors should speak up, any artist should."

Along similar lines Wallach thought that the type of product churned out by Hollywood for the past twenty years or so might change as well. "I've lived through the beginnings of television where you couldn't say as much as 'damn,' where you couldn't get in bed together...every second word in television now is 'f___ you.' The violence on television and in movies is disgusting. I don't know if any of this will change now but I do know that adults need something more; adults need to see movies dealing with some sort of substance." He believes that much of what passes for entertainment these days on television really is tantamount to "testing all the moral fiber of this country, and I don't exclude the other side of the coin either. The televangelists who make money by the millions...who's the guy who told his audience that 'God is going to punish me if I don't make eight million bucks today!'"

In more than eighty films, spanning a period of forty-five years, Eli Wallach has endowed us with a rich cinematic gallery of unforgettable performances remarkable for the variety and range of his singular and indelible characterizations. The Tony and the Emmy are only two of the many awards he has accumulated for roles stretching all the way back to the forties. A member of the board of both "The Actor's Studio," and "The Neighborhood Playhouse;" a gentleman who is involved in many philanthropic activities for disabled children as spokesman and supporter; a globe trotting honoree at international award ceremonies. Citing his career, one would think that at his age Mr. Wallach might be slowing down just a bit to savor the rewards.

"Rarely do I work anymore, I mean...movies are a young man's game." In February and March, Anne and he will be in Florida, on stage, in Tennessee Williams Remembered, performing works from four of his plays and reminiscing about their personal and professional collaboration with one of the giants of American theater. He has an exhibition of his own photographs coming up in April at the Leica Gallery in New York. It's his personal collection of behind-the-scene shots "on location" from films he has done around the world. In addition to all of this activity, he is busily engaged in writing a book of memoirs about the early years in Hollywood and on Broadway with his wife.

Still, when I suggest that this peripatetic work schedule would present a daunting challenge to a man half his age, he repeats that age-old mantra of all performers, everywhere. "I don't know, I guess one of the most important things in life is to keep working...that's all I really care about, doing a good job." •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #177
Smith Street

The world is full of famous streets. Fifth Avenue, Pennsylvania Avenue, Chevy Chase, Rodeo Drive, The Champs Elysee, Embarcadero, Baker Street, Hollywood & Vine and one small unsung heroic throughway. Yes, I speak of Smith Street on Shelter Island.

Smith Street, a humble name, a short, seemingly insignificant street near the school. I believe it should be made mandatory that realtors who sell a home on Smith Street disclose its legacy...

Every Halloween, after the Halloween Parade in front of the Firehouse, all our kids go trick or treating down the nearby Smith Street. Hundreds of children, dressed in costumes, looking so innocent as they descend on the homes of the residents like screaming eagles going in for the kill. The police barracade both ends of the street so the screaming eagles can't attack other streets.

For years the residents of Smith Street scrimped and saved all year to have enough money for all the candy they needed to survive the onslaught. Education funds were raided, T-bills cashed in, jewelry hocked, first born children sold, all to get enough packets of M&Ms.

At some point in the past, the School, feeling for the innocent "Smithies," began to collect candy for them before Halloween. No Smithie has to spend the mortage money on Ju-Ju-Bees anymore. The community pitches in to see that they are well stocked.

I have seen how the Smithies have adapted to living on Shelter Islands most famous street. To minimize the impact of the invasion, they all set up camp outside on their lawns. They get comfy: lazy boys, TV, refrigerator, throw rugs, maybe a few pictures hanging on trees... the ability of the human spirit to handle adversity is amazing. And there they sit on Halloween, all the wonderful Smithies, smiling and laughing with every little face that comes begging for a treat. Not one of them is armed with a bat, like I would be if I were a Smithie. It brings a tear to my eye.

I love how so many families really get into Halloween costumes. I have such admiration for these SuperMoms who pull together so many creative and adorable costumes. My personal, all time favorite prize, goes to the family a few years back, who came as a McDonald's Happy Meal. Dad was the Ham-Burglar, there was a pack of fries, a Big Mac, a drink... it was hysterical! I got the picture in my head of some guy sitting at the Dory that night saying, " ...and then, I saw, I saw, french fries, walking by me, ana, ana, a Big Mac, no, I swear, ana bandit, er something with skinny striped legs, and it was all walking by, swear to God, but, I didn't get a toy..."

No one seems to know when the tradition of every child on Shelter Island trick or treating on Smith Street began. Pundits can only speculate based on the numerous mentions of it in historical documents. It was mentioned in the Constitution as an adendum. " ...and therefore we pledge also to see the residents of Smithe Street liberated from their unjust oppression." It was mentioned in the Magna Carta as well. "...and in the event we should acquire the Island of Shelter in the yet undiscovered land of Amerikay, we will rend the occupants of Smythe Street from their annual enslavement." The earliest mention of Smith Street was of course the famous biblical reference from Genesis, "... and on the millioneth and oneth day, He created Smith Street, and seeing that the earth was done, He said, 'and I'm outta here!'"

Pakistan, in our eyes, been far too tolerant of their next door neighbors, the Taliban, but we didn't like the fact that they were so much at odds with another neighbor India, with both of them having atomic bombs. For a long time the two countries have been fighting or almost fighting over a cold, mountainous area that both for some reason want to claim, called Kashmir.

But with September 11 and America's decision to bring down the Taliban, the U.S. has had to overlook its misgiving and make Pakistan an ally. It was quickly done. In the two months since the Twin Towers tragedy, America has "rescheduled" Pakistan's debt of $396 million, granted a $300 million line of credit for companies who want to invest in Pakistan and even allocated $73 million for Pakistan to patrol its borders and $34 million for Pakistan to help fight drug trafficking. (Neighboring Afghanistan is the world's number one producer and importer of opium and heroin.) To top it off, just last week, the U.S. government gave Pakistan $600 million in foreign aid.

Well, alliances cost money.

At any rate, Pakistan was very proud it exploded its first nuclear device on May 28, 1998, and every year since then has had a national holiday called Yaum-e-Takbeer. Pakistan said it had been forced into joining the nuclear club by the fact that India had exploded its first two nuclear devices on May 11 and May 13 of the same year. To keep the score even, Pakistan exploded its second nuclear device on May 30.

As part of the countrywide celebrations that occur on May 28, there are chess competitions, boxing matches, blood drives and banners of mushroom clouds. Across Pakistan there are billboards in praise of the country's "nuclear heroes," such as nuclear scientist Abdul Qaeda Khan, who was the premier designer of Pakistan's bomb.

The holiday, Yaum-e-Takbeer, is translated approximately as "A day to praise God."

Other events for the holiday include a radio quiz show for college students to see how much they know about nuclear technology. There is a Yaum-e-Takbeer basketball championship and bicycle race, and a ping pong championship.

Pakistan contends it is not celebrating something destructive but the country's "self-reliance."

After the first celebration of Yaum-e-Takbeer in 1999, Pakistan radio broadcast, in part, the following, "The week-long celebrations of Yaum-e-Takbeer culminate today with thanksgiving prayers by a grateful nation to Allah Almighty for giving it strength to make Pakistan a nuclear power on this day last year."

On October 15, 2000, 60 Minutes aired a segment on nuclear Pakistan. Steve Kroft led in with: "Imagine a country with an arsenal of nuclear bombs where the elected prime minister is in jail and the generals who have taken power are beholden to Islamic radicals who revere Osama bin Laden and hate the united States.... There is no other country in the world where 100,000 well-armed militant fundamentalists could end up controlling nuclear weapons – what some people call the Islamic bomb."

There is a quote from a member of Pakistan's military, Fazur Rahman Khalil: "God has ordered us to make nuclear weapons."

The assessment of an expert was that Pakistan had about twenty-five nuclear weapons. The country's current leader, General Pervez Musharraf (whom you may have recently seen interviewed by Barbara Walters), responding to the question of just who has access to the bombs, said "Pakistan is a very moderate Islamic country, and I mean it."

However, some of the biggest demonstrations against America's campaign in Afghanistan occurred in Pakistan. And only last week diagrams were found in a Taliban/Al Qaeda hideout taken by America. The pundits said the information was no more detailed than those that could be gotten off the Internet, but, coupled with a recent interview with bin Laden by a Pakistani journalist in which bin Laden said he has access to nuclear devices, it is not much of a stretch to consider all this a gruesome possibility. Certainly, before September 11, the possibility of two hijacked planes crashing into the World Trade Center and a third into the Pentagon, all within the same hour, would have been considered too paranoid to contemplate seriously. But after September 11 all bets are off, and it is not surprising that gas masks are being sold, computer nerds work over simulations of Al Qaeda and the leadership of Pakistan believes that Allah has guided its country to the bomb. Well, it is not unlikely that more than a few prayers to the Almighty were directed heavenward at Alamorgordo. ● review: picasso and einstein: two wild and crazy guys!

By Jolie Trueman-Honey

Well, not actually, but in the hands of Steve Martin, they certainly are. And they are the main characters of his farce entitled Picasso at the Lapin Agile performed by Playcrafters in Bellport. Set in 1904, Martin has created a fictitious meeting between the two geniuses, ages 23 and 25 respectively, at the Lapin Agile, a tavern in the Montmartre section of Paris which was a favorite gathering place for struggling artists and writers.

An interesting premise. But let's remember, the author is a man who walked out onto a stage in a white suit with an arrow through his head! It's the same guy who covered his naked private parts with a small dog! So, if you're thinking that the play might sound a bit highbrow, forget it! It's a roller coaster ride from start to finish, with a few serious ideas sprinkled around for good measure.

Here's an example. Into the bar comes a young Albert Einstein who divulges in a lengthy speech that he is meeting a beautiful young lady there. When he finishes his speech, the bartender angrily walks off the stage and into the audience, grabs a person's playbill, and informs Einstein that in the program the cast is listed "in order of appearance" and he is supposed to be the fourth, not the third, character onstage; so he'd better get off!

Eventually, Picasso enters and the characters are off on a discussion of art and love and the beauty of scientific theory. At its best, the play has moments when I was reminded of theater of the absurd, of something written by Eugene Ionesco or Luigi Pirandello. At its worst, the play reminded me of a high school senior follies.

When you think of it, isn't that an apt reflection of Steve Martin? We all adore the Steve Martin of The Jerk, the lovable idiot who describes himself as growing up "a poor black child," his humor often extremely adolescent. (Excu-u-use me!) However, Martin is not solely a comedian. His credits demonstrate a more intellectual bent. It is the juxtaposition of the serious and the silly that we see in this play.

In the second act a new character, Schmendiman, certainly the embodiment of Steve Martin's own stage persona, enters. He sees himself as the third side of the triangle: Picasso, Einstein, and... Schmendiman! His claim to fame? He has invented something that will change the 20th century: a brittle and inflexible building material made from asbestos. He already has contracts to build in San Francisco and Krakatoa.

The second act is capped by the appearance of a mystery guest who helps the characters evaluate the important contributions of art and science to our times.

The comedy was handled ably by the secondary characters: Schmendiman, well-played by Anthony Griffin; the art dealer Sagot, an outstanding job by Dan Love; Freddy, (Ron Kagel); Gaston (John Tighe) and Germaine (Phyllis March). But the drama was diminished as the audience never feels the passion of Picasso (Mike Danisi). Jonathan Bonett was more credible as Albert Einstein, but every now and then he reminded this reviewer of Groucho Marx (which may or may not be a bad thing!)

The play won the 1996 New York Outer Critics Circle Awards for best play and best playwright. I can say this: it made me laugh. Perhaps for today, that's enough.

At last! The long-anticipated release of the estate line of premium reds from Galluccio Estate Vineyards. In addition to their holiday and corporate gift packaging, Galluccio is also very excited to offer custom private labeling for their entire line. It is done in-house and at no additional cost for quantity orders. What a perfect gift idea, and there is only a one case minimum!

Remember the interview Dan's Papers did with Vince Galluccio regarding his plans to expand westward? Well, here's the latest:

According to John Perry, Senior Vice President of Market Operations at Galluccio, "Out in Napa Valley, GEV continues to proceed with plans for their West Coast production. With an incredible 2000 Napa Cabernet Sauvignon now in oak barrels, the entire production team will be flying out in January, to evaluate the wine, as well conduct blending trials for their California line expected to be released in 2002. One such release will be the Tuscan style blend, "Luccia," named after Vince Galluccio's great grandmother, Cara Luccia."

What's next for this cross-continental entrepreneur? Remember, Vince is used to doing business on a global scale...

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

Theory of Relativity

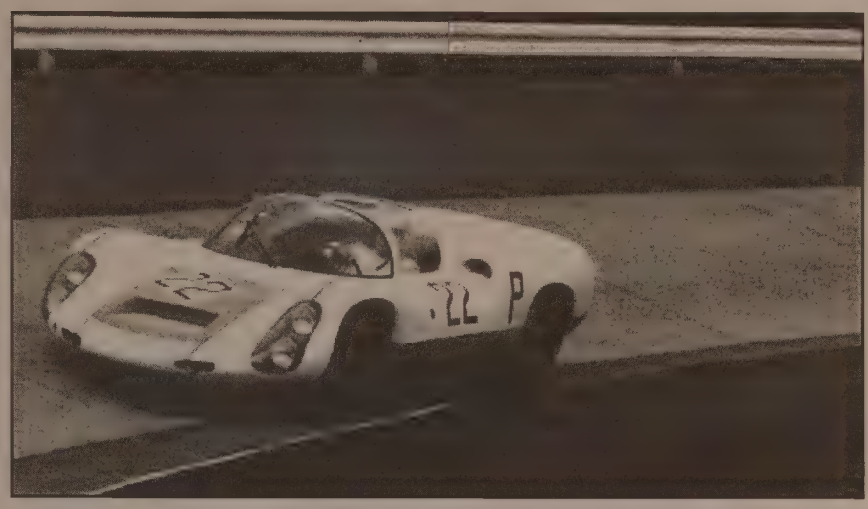
I've always felt that the sensation of speed is relative to the vehicle that you are moving in or on. Take the sailboat, or even a horse, probably two of man's oldest forms of getting from point A to B. The sailboat is an invention dating back to biblical days. Although it looks like a simple device modern sailboats are really quite complex. The fastest of the single hull boats can only achieve what is called hull speed, which, with the proper wind, is about 12 miles per hour.

However, when you're on a sailboat, and the boat is heeled over at a twenty degree angle reaching for the wind, with the salt spray combing through your hair, and the water flashing by your bare feet like a mountain stream, you actually feel as if you're going fast.

Today it's quite common for adventuresome sailors to sail their own 30 to 50 foot boats across the Atlantic from the U.S. to Europe. If they average a speed of six knots, about 8 mph, that is considered a relatively fast passage.

Then we have the horse. These magnificent creatures are really mans' best friend. (Can one sit on a dog and take it for a ride?) A good horse at full gallop is probably moving at about 25mph. I'm guessing here, but that seems about right. And yet, this feels like a breakneck speed. (Excuse the pun.) You are precariously perched upon a gyrating and bouncing muscular animal that really doesn't seem to notice that you're on his back. It's not the ground that whizzes by, because to add to the suspense, the hard dirt is well below your line of sight. It's the tree limbs that cause concern, as they tease your peripheral vision with their nearness to your noggin. Riding on a horse at speed feels fast because there is a lot happening here.Your derriere knows.

About the closest thing to a horse is a motorcycle, and what I consider the equlvalent, the water born motorcycle-the personal watercraft. Unlike the the above methods of transportation, these machines are genuinely fast. However, they feel much faster than they actually are, due to the fact that riding on either of them truly thrashes the senses.



Take the motorcycle. Here you have a reltively small machine that makes a lot of noise. You straddle it like a horse, but unlike a horse, it sits low to the ground. At any speed, the ground is omnipresent, actually moving just inches below the toes of your feet. Add to this visual and audible mix the wind buffeting your clothes and trying to tear off your helmet, and you have the formula for feeling like you are faster than life. 40 mph on a motorcycle really feels like 70 mph. I've driven a motorcycle at over 100 mph, and the sensation is a lot like when the Starship Enterprise morphs into Hyperdrive.

Surprisingly, airplanes don't feel fast because you're cocooned inside a cockpit and a long distance from any point of reference (like the ground). There is really very little sensation of speed. It's a shame, because the space shuttle moving at 18,000 miles per hour would really be an interesting experiment in human sensory overload if that speed could somehow be felt.

The fastest vehicles on earth are racecars, and I'm certain the open wheeled cars, like the Formula One racers, feel much faster than the NASCAR type coupes. Again it's the sensory factor. Another thing about driving an open wheeled racecar is that you can actually see the front wheels spin, slip, and bounce about over the various changes in the pavement. As a driver in a racecar without a roof, you are "just out there" with the wind and noise assaulting your entire being.

At one time I raced a Porsche 910 Bergspyder (Mountain racer). It was a flimsy, fiberglass-bodied car, which at the time was considered to be the fastest two liter racing car in the world.It had no roof, and barely a windshield. My helmeted head was way out in the breeze. I remember driving down the straight-away at the Bridgehampton Race Circut doing about 150 mph. I never saw it but a large bug hit my helmet. At that velocity, the bug collision was so strong that it slammed my helmeted head back into the roll bar. Moments like that make one realize they're really going fast. The bug incident underscores an old motorcycle axiom: motorcycle riders without helmets never smile!

Lesson learned: If you want near-death sensory overload, race cars or drive a motorcycle. Personally, I'm getting near the age where a six mile-per-hour sailboat looks pretty exciting. Bob, an automotive expert, can be reached at Remsenburg@aol.com for comments or questions.

Tradition: The Icing On The Cookie

I come from a long line of cookie decorators. Stretching back into the mists of time, on my mother's side of the family, throughout the ages we have come together during the holidays to celebrate and decorate cookies.

Actually, that's a slight exaggeration. I believe the tradition started with my mother in the years just after she and my father were married. As they are fond of telling my sisters and me, they were very poor in those years and one Christmas, while struggling to make ends meet, my mother decided to decorate cookies and give them as presents. She had a flair for the activity and the cookies were well-received by all, and by my grandmother in particular. Grandma deemed the cookies "too beautiful to eat" and she placed them in the refrigerator for safe keeping. Years later when my sisters and I would open Grandma's fridge the cookies were still there.

By the time my sisters and I were able to wield the tubes of frosting required for decorating with some aptitude, or at least enough to squeeze the tubes into our mouths, my mother started the tradition of decorating cookies together. A week or so before Christmas my mother would go into full cooking mode and turn out a bevy of delights from the kitchen, including the flat, pale white cookies that had been cut in the shapes of angels, bells, Christmas trees and a variety of other holiday shapes. Laying out a kaleidoscope of colors, red, green, yellow, blue, brown, pink, white, we would sit down at the kitchen table and create our "masterpieces."

In the early years our creations relied on the aesthetic guiding principle that "more was better." My youngest sister had a particular talent for creating carefully, and often not so carefully, sculpted piles of frosting that challenged the fragile cookie's ability to bear the weight. Thankfully, these precarious creations were rapidly consumed. I too was a master of the mound, though I relied on a near neurotic need to create perfectly symmetrical cookies, which was probably a latent expression of my Lego habit.

The process was fun, it was a chance during the busy holidays to get together and get into the spirit of the season, not to mention the chance to consume our "mistakes," of which there were many. In those early years, my sisters and I would create the cookies for home consumption, while my mother created works that were presentable to the extended family and friends. As the tradition continued and my sisters and I gained some talent, or at least enough common sense to realize that a mound of frosting is not the apex of achievement in cookie decorating, we were given the responsibility of decorating for a wider audience.

Whenever we would go to visit the relatives or family friends we would carry with us a plate of decorated cookies. They were the family's holiday trademark. Even in the years after I headed off to college and my sisters were wrapped up with "very important" phone calls to their high school classmates, there were always the cookies to decorate. As we got older we also got more creative and before too long our cookies were telling little stories. On one misguided occasion I created a series of X-rated cookies featuring buxom blondes and off-color sayings that turned out to be a big hit at our Christmas Eve party. Regardless of what was on the cookies, the time spent decorating was always a time to have fun together.

Little traditions like this are always a valuable thing to share around the holidays. Even when there were a thousand other things to do and people to see there was always a couple hours that we spent together making the cookies. With the madness of the holidays now upon us, don't forget to keep up the traditions that bring your family together and if you don't have a cookie decorating tradition or something like it, start one.

Holiday Guide 2001

Christmas Tree, Oh Christmas Tree

In some households, the moment the Thanksgiving dinner dishes are washed and put back into the cupboard, the family is ready to head to the nearest Christmas Tree lot and make their selection. Some families will conservatively wait until a few weeks before Christmas, and yet others prefer to make a batch of eggnog, put on the Chipmunk Christmas Album and decorate the tree Christmas Eve, finishing just in time for the arrival of the Jolly man himself.

Whatever your family tradition is, you will eventually find yourself standing in the Christmas tree lot wondering which tree will be the perfect one to grace your home and help make this the "best Christmas yet!" The first thing you need to know is the size of the tree you will need for that pre-selected area that will show off this wonder to it's fullest. Now you are ready to get up close and personal with your tree. Approach your choice and gently pull on the needles. They should be tightly attached to the twig. Fir and pine trees hold needles better than spruce trees.

Then shake your tree vigorously, or bounce the butt of the tree on the ground. If green needles fall, look further. Dead, brown needles falling from the inner part of the tree may have been shed years ago and are not a freshness problem. However, you will want to give your tree a good bounce before you bring it into the house to clean out some of these dead needles, better on the garage floor than the living room rug.

Check to see if your tree has a fresh green color. Then break a few needles. They should be flexible and will feel moist or possibly sticky. They should also be fragrant when crushed.

Be sure the limbs of your tree are strong enough to support lights and your treasured ornaments. Limbs should also be well placed to give the tree a pleasing shape. Minor defects can often be turned toward a wall, and can sometimes help you to negotiate a better price for that particular tree. If possible, you should select your tree in daylight. No matter how romantic it is to seek out your tree on a winter's night with just small twinkle lights as a guide, you may regret it in the morning when you see your treasure featured in full light!

If you are the adventurous type, seeking a trip back into time when our forefathers marched through the snow to cut down the perfect tree located in the neighbor's meadow, you may want to select and cut your own tree. Our local area has many fine Christmas Tree Farms. You will want to use the same guidelines as outlined above if you were cutting your own tree. Freshness and health are still the most important characteristics. Some growers prefer to cut the tree themselves, some offer the saw to you. You may want to bring your own saw, freshly sharpened and oiled.

Once you have made your made your selection, have

Holiday Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

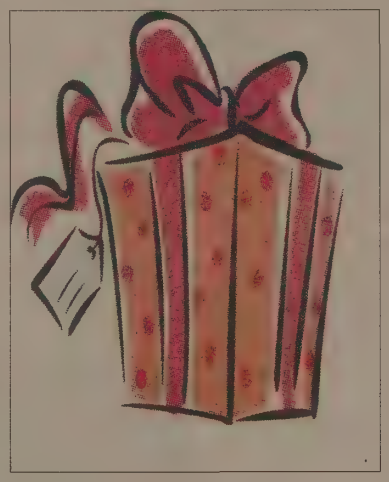
The Hampton shops are buzzing with holiday excitement and there is lots of shopping going on. Sooo, let's do some happy holiday shopping!

At Flying Point Surf Shop on Route 27 in Southampton and also at their Main Street Southampton shop you will find the hottest new clothing line that includes Triple 5 Soul, at the best prices available right now. Uh, oh, just let that secret out of the bag.

Another scoop that I know you all need to know is that eden rocks! on. Located on Jobs Lane, has a hot new item with 20% off! Nicole Miller scarves and personal accessories are the newest hottest items and the sale starts Thanksgiving weekend. Go and rock with eden...

Oh my, these three day Thanksgiving holiday sales are all over and one you should not miss is the holiday sale at the Cashmere Outlet 43A Jobs Lane in Southampton. Starting on Friday through Sunday, November 23 to 25, there is an additional 10% to 40% off their already discounted prices. All the Scottish cashmeres for ladies and men are drastically reduced for this special sale. In addition, Cashmere Outlet is donating 10% of all their sales to the Mary Lea Johnson Richards Institute for Liver and Pancreas research and treatment at the NYU Medical Center. Open from 11 a.m. Friday and Saturday and at 12 noon on Sunday. This is a special event sale that should not be missed.

Also on Jobs Lane in Southampton, The Secret Closet is having their annual "Year End Fall/Winter Sale" with great buys from 30% to 50% off. Here you are sure to find great jackets, skirts, pants, sweaters and blouses regularly $90 to $400, now from $49 to $199. Pure fabrics such as wool, leather, silk, velvet, mohair blends and ultrasuedes in interesting textures colors and distinctive styles. Don't miss out on this year-end event.



When you feel up to getting into the holiday mood, I can recommend the following ideas. Parrish Museum in Southampton will hold a "Holiday Shopping Extravaganza" preview cocktail party on Friday evening November 23, from 5 to 8 p.m. This will kick off two days of shopping at their gift shop that has been inundated with incredible finds and unique gifts that will not be seen anywhere else. This is a great way to spend the Thanksgiving Day weekend for sure! For information and tickets for the special reception on November 23, call 283-2118.

Guess what I just found out? If you are a guest at the Southampton Inn from now until Christmas, they are providing a special gift wrapping room, complete with wrappings, bows, ribbons, etc., so that you can wrap all your holiday gifts. This is a free service with bonus music; libations and sweets that will also be provided...What a hoot!

For three days only, (guess which three), Friday, through Sunday over the Thanksgiving weekend, The John Rogers Collection is having a Thanksgiving/Christmas "Warehouse Sale." The warehouse is located at 171 Mariner Drive in Southampton and there is a final clearance on hand-crafted teak colonial furniture that include dining chairs, tables, game tables, coffee tables and assorted accessories. Look for garden teak chairs and tables, exclusive rattan chairs and tables and fall high point market samples. Call 631-283-7209 for info.

In Watermill on Montauk Highway at Double Rainbow there is a large selection of holiday buys on toys, games, Ty Beanie Babies, Legos, Hello Kitty, Breyer Horses, cards, everything you can think of under one roof. There is a ton of holiday candies here; so much you almost can't make a choice. A popular gift this season is their kiddie cars in many different styles and colors starting at $375. Also they have one of the largest selections of Godiva in the Hamptons and if you bring in the ad from Dan's Papers or mention my column Double Rainbow will give a 10% discount on a $50 purchase or more. Every penny counts!

At The Design Studio on Main Street in Bridgehampton (next to Bobby Vans) there is an incredible floor sample sale on selected furniture, accessories, tables and lamps going on. Look for savings of 30% to 50% off beautiful and eclectic merchandise here. Just to see this shop is an experience in itself. Trust me on this one!

At Anne Moore Hats on Main Street in Bridgehampton you will find some real great looking hats and accessories. All spring and summer collections are 30% off regular prices. Bet you saw Oprah in an Anne Moore hat this summer on the cover of O magazine. Get going, no kidding!

Country Gear on Main Street in Bridgehampton will begin an "ongoing" basement sale of discontinued and inventory clearance items from Loom Italia and Country Gear stock. All items will be marked down from 25 to 50%! The sale begins on Tuesday, November 20.

Christian K. Andrews, Ltd. is holding its first "Annual Warehouse Sale" at its Bridgehampton location (5 Tradesman's Path-off Butter Lane), on Friday, November 23, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Hundreds of items are reduced from 20% to 60% off including antique Chinese armoires, tables, benches, desks, chairs, baskets, lamps, European antiques, large pottery, vases and much more. Don't miss this one, it's a goodie!

Lot's going on at Lisan & Co. also on 213 Butter Lane, space F. this holiday weekend. This is the "Grand Opening & Christmas Sale" that Anna and some artist friends will be doing together. Look for a smashing dupion silk line and maybe even cashmere too. This shop is literally stocked to the rafters with great country furniture, accessories and so much more. One of my favorites for sure!

If you are looking for some great deals on furs, look no further. Sdrouglas Furs located at 213 Butter Lane is having a final liquidation of inventory sale starting Friday through Sunday of the Thanksgiving Day weekend. You can select top quality furs, headpieces, boas and blankets and find incredible buys here because everything is priced below cost. Call 917-868-5398 for information.

Holiday Guide 2001

Holiday 2001: Not Your Basic Black!

Glamour prevails for holiday dressing, with black making a strong comeback as the color of choice. The key difference? This season black offers a wide array of styles and options. Mix your black fashion with color and accessories for appealing new looks. It's not your basic black. Black and white, black with color, black lace and, of course, the classic long black dress are all-important. The good news is that separates play a key role – resulting in clothing that become much more wearable, even after the holiday season...

The Life Of The Party

"Do plan your outfit in advance of the party," advises T.J. Maxx's Laura McDowell. "It's best to consider where the party will be held and what type of dress is most appropriate. Comfort should be a high priority. Remember that it is possible to be fashionable and comfortable at the same time. It's definitely not your basic black either.

The Family Gathering

These gatherings are most likely to be held at home; therefore comfort should be a top priority! Sleeveless turtlenecks and argyle sweaters are a terrific combination. Pair with stylish black and white plaid pants and ankle boots for a polished, pulled-together outfit. Thick knits, especially cowl-neck sweaters, look great with suede or velvet pants and are an easy way to update your look for the holiday season.

The Office Party

This is the place to err on the conservative side! Since many office festivities are held directly after work, consider the latest trend, a tuxedo shirt, now in fashionable silk shantung. Wear it with a dressy black pantsuit and you can go directly from the office to the party. After work, just switch to high-heeled sandals, a rhinestone belt, and a great pair of gold earrings (gold is back this season!) The end result: instant party glamour.

T.J. Max

Trendy Chick: Going to A Nightclub Bash

Sweaters and pants look altogether modern when paired with high shaft boots. Look for "retro" faux fur trimmed sweaters and cropped wide leg pants. Jewel tone colors look striking with black, such as black/fuchsia or black/emerald. Leather is still one of the biggest looks for the season, so pair soft leather pants with an ultra trendy duster. Try a sequin purse for a dazzling effect.

The Formal Affair: A Night To Remember

It's time to break out the party dress and black has never looked better! What's new? Beaded dresses, embellished velvet, high neck halters, and "cracked ice" looks on dresses, tops and skirts. Beaded shawls can be absolutely stunning and a glamorous way to accent a basic black dress as well as a scarf with a beaded trim. You can dress up (or down) any black dress with different accessories. Put on a pair of suede pumps or sandals and you are ready.

Shop Off-Price For Value

To stretch your wardrobe even further, shop off-price stores like T.J. Maxx, where brand name and designer merchandise accessories are all available at significantly reduced prices. The chain sells brand name, designer merchandise and accessories at prices up to 60% less than department and specialty store regular prices.

Hot Toys

Attention readers: If you are the parent of a child ages six to twelve you don't need to read this column – in fact, you probably could have written it. By the time the Thanksgiving leftovers have been packed into the fridge, Christmas and Hanukah are officially upon us and undoubtedly, if they haven't already, your children will soon supply you with a list of their wants, and some may argue needs, for the holiday season. For most parents there is little question about what their kids' want. This column is provided as a service to the aunts and uncles, grandparents, cousins and anyone else who has to brave the toy stores in this holiday season in search of the perfect gift.

Harry is hot. The Harry Potter books have been flying off shelves for a couple years now and with the recent arrival of the first Harry Potter movie in theaters last week the young wizard is poised for merchandizing magic. Everything from the enormous LEGO Hogwarts Castle ($90) to the Harry Potter Infrared Magic Wand ($30), which contains a four-way motion sensor with four color-coded spell buttons that let you wave your wand and cast a spell in specific directions, will be disappearing from stores everywhere. When Voldemort (ask a kid) performs his spells, you need to counter with the proper command. For the shopper who is hesitant to give a gift with little redeeming educational or functional value, the Harry Potter toys are a good option. The books sparked a reading renaissance among children and with more books to come, fueling the Harry habit may not be a bad thing.

The loveable characters from Monsters Inc., another movie to merchandise phenomenon, will also be appearing at the top of many lists. The two big stars of this Disney production are Sulley, think the abominable snowman but blue, and Mike, a green ball that is essentially an eye with arms and legs. The kids just love 'em. Glowing Bedtime Sulley ($30) is about 12 inches tall and when hugged his Scream Canister glows and he will say calming phrases until he gets sleepy and falls asleep with a deep have your tree wrapped and secured on your vehicle. At home, cut about an inch off the butt end of the tree. This will aid in water absorption. Place the tree into a container of water immediately. If the tree is not to be put up right away, store it in a protected, shady, unheated area, placed in a bucket of water. When the tree is brought into the house, saw a slice of the butt again to ensure water absorption.

Use a sturdy stand with a large water reservoir. A fresh tree can use up to a quart of water or more a day, so water your tree daily. If you notice your tree is no longer absorbing water, it is beginning to dry out. Remember to keep your tree away from heat sources such as fireplaces, TVs, radiators, and air ducts. Never have an open flame on or near a Christmas tree.

Now you are ready to decorate and enjoy this vision of Christmas for the holiday season. These words of wisdom have been brought to you by the staff of the retail store of J. Tortorella Swimming Pools, located at 296 West Montauk Highway in Hampton Bays. They will have a selection of lovely fresh trees arriving the week of Thanksgiving. Select your special tree, then step inside our lovely Christmas shop to select your tree trimmings and other items to decorate your home.

Have a safe and lovely holiday!

The Art Of The Party

Congratulations! You have successfully entertained all of the relatives, and prepared an elaborate feast to celebrate Thanksgiving brilliantly. The turkey with the savory stuffing was divine, the cranberry relish and breads were delicious, and Aunt Molly must have your recipe for that apple crumb pie. The compliments are still coming in for your spectacular menu, and how on earth did you ever find the time to create such a lavish spread that so impressed everyone this year?

Now it is time to relax, rest on your laurels and let a creative caterer assist you with home parties, during the holiday season.

Paul Evans has been catering parties throughout Long Island and New York City for the past twenty-seven years. If you can hire a professional caterer, that would certainly be ideal. But if you cannot, it is still important to plan a party that will allow you and your guests to enjoy the special qualities of your home environment, especially now, when home gatherings are so important for solace and stability. Here are some useful tips.

Besides holiday decorating to make your home beautiful and inviting, using foods as decorative touches will add grace and color to your decor. Oranges studded with cloves, combined with bundles of cinnamon sticks placed in hot apple cider on top of the stove, send a delightful aroma throughout the house. Cranberry garlands mixed with magnolia, leaves strewn around the fireplace, pineapples in urns (a New England form of saying welcome), are all appealing touches that add warmth to the environment. Having everyone pitch in with the decor is a great family project that will make a lasting impression on children and make having a party that much more memorable!

Comforting dinners such as a centerpiece of stuffed loin of pork with spinach and mushrooms or tender veal prepared with fresh herbs, port wine and caramelized onions are comfort foods to warm the spirit.

An elegant cocktail party is also a wonderful way to sigh or snore. Sulley may get lonely without his pal Mike, so consider Electronic Action-Eye Mike Wazowski ($20), who will say eight different phrases when you move his arm and, yeah you guessed it, move his eye. There will be monsters everywhere in the next month so keep an eye peeled.

You can't go wrong with Barbie and the folks at Mattel are always happy to create a new line of accessories every year for this classic 11 1/2-inch blonde. Consider the Barbie Wireless Convertible Car ($30), which has a retractable hard top roof that goes up and down using a wireless infrared remote, a real working alarm that engages lights and sounds, a working horn, headlights and brake lights and three speeds, forward, reverse and stop. If the car isn't an option try the Wash 'N Wear Barbie ($20), which comes with a working play washing machine that really holds water and magically changes her outfits two different colors with warm or cold water.

What Christmas would be complete without a robot? The world of toys has embraced technology and so have the kids. Tekno Dinkie Robot Baby ($20) is a small, fully functioning toy robot with a distinctive personality and cute characteristics. The animated LCD screen face shows when she is happy or sad and a voice that speaks Dinkish, the Dinkies' own special language, allows communication with you and other Dinkies. They laugh, they cry, they'll even ask for a bottle and then rock back and forth doing the special baby dance.

Sony sparked a trend with their release of Aibo, the robot dog, a few years ago and now a number of manufacturers are producing similar toys. Artificial intelligence technology allows i-Cybie Dog ($180) to respond and react like a real dog, with sixteen separate motors to control hundreds of actions. His head, tail, legs, mouth and ears are movable. He can sense night and day, sound, touch and motion. Intelligent sensors keep him from walking into obstacles or off an edge. Batteries aren't included but he is house broken.

Undoubtedly, video games will have a prominent position on many lists and this year that may not be such a bad thing. All the blood and gore that video games featured in years past have taken a backseat this year to games that are geared towards challenging the brain rather than the trigger finger. The long-awaited Myst III: Exile ($43) is similar to previous installments of this legendary series, and it slowly unfolds a hypnotic story line that leads through a series of breathtakingly detailed alien worlds. Its state-of-the-art 3D graphics, captivating puzzles and complete absence of profanity and violence will make it an instant classic.

Probably the hardest game systems to get this year will be the new offerings from Microsoft and Nintendo. It's not surprising that Microsoft has entered the multi-million-dollar world of game consoles with the recent launch of the Xbox ($300). Microsoft wasn't content to sit on the sidelines and watch Sony and Nintendo dominate the gaming world. The Xbox will go head to head with the Nintendo Game Cube ($200), which was released just days after the Xbox. Both will provide incredible action and feature highly sought after games. Among the titles in the Xbox camp is Dead or Alive 3 ($50), which is Microsoft's answer to Laura Croft, and in Nintendo's stable is Star Wars: Rogue Squad ($50). The final winner in this head to head bout remains to be seen, but Las Vegas is betting heavy on the Game Cube because of it's lower price tag, longer list of games and virtually identical quality of play on each system.

Action figures are always a popular option for Christmas and this year favor has fallen to classic heroes like policemen, firefighters and construction workers rather than their alien counterparts. Fisher Price has a series of Voice Tech Mission Command Rescue Worker action figures perfect for children age three and up. Wendy entertain friends and family for this holiday. Dressed in your best attire, serve your fine wines and champagnes in sparkling glassware (come on, take out the good stuff!) Twinkling votive candles create a magical environment which gets everyone in the spirit for celebrating!

Hanukkah arrives early this year and a family get together has more meaning than ever this season. Blue and gold decorations, with traditional foods such as sizzling potato pancakes and brisket savored with dried fruit add a continuity and happiness to this joyous time of year!

Remember, the easiest way is to cater, which frees you to be a guest at your own party. For more information, call Paul Evans Caterers at 631-288-5992.

Their signature brownie recipe is included for you to try at home!

INGREDIENTS:

I pound (4 sticks) unsalted butter
1 pound plus 3 cups semi-sweet chocolate chips
6 ounces unsweetened chocolate
6 large eggs
2 tablespoons Kahlua
2 tablespoons vanilla extract
2-1/4 cups sugar
1/2 cup cocoa powder
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
3 cups chopped walnuts
I cup shredded coconut

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Grease and flour a 12" x 18" pan, set aside.

In a double boiler, melt the butter, 1 pound of the chocolate chips and the unsweetened chocolate until smooth. Cool to room temperature. Combine, but do not whisk, the eggs, Kahlua, vanilla and sugar.

Stir in the cooled chocolate mixture. Set aside.

Sift together the flour, cocoa powder, baking powder and salt. Mix into the batter. Finally, fold in the other cup of chocolate chips, coconut and walnuts. Pour into the greased pan.

Bake for about 30 minutes, or until a tester comes out just clean. Don't over bake. Cool thoroughly. Cut into squares and enjoy! Makes about 20 brownies.

She has just received a huge assortment of first quality designer clothing. And get this one; everything will be priced at $12.95. I was welcome to be the first to look through the selection, and I went wild! I found a pair of Ralph Lauren leather pants, pre ticketed at $299, DKNY sweaters, tagged $158, Liz Claiborne silk tops, and more...all at $12.95. The assortment consists of items from wool blazers to sequined tops. I left with five shopping bags. Don't miss this one...Oh, Dan, I need a raise...

Before I close this column, Lynne Heffner Ferrante, this week's Dan's Papers cover artist is taking orders at her Art Studio, Sag Harbor, for silk scarves with the same motif, and for Gi-Clay prints (that look more real than the original!). Twenty five percent of proceeds will go to WTC victims' relief fund. This piece was part of the USA 911 Show at Artists Woods in Amagansett last month. Give her a call for availability and prices at 631-725-0266.

Oh boy, I am exhausted...I need a manicure, pedicure and massage and what better place to go but the Style Bar Day Spa on Bay Street in Sag Harbor. I feel like two million when I leave there. Check out their extensive line of health and beauty products and don't forget those gift certificates for holiday gift giving. Like I said, Dan, I really need a raise!

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Holiday Shopping!

Confronted by the myriad options for presents this year it is easy to become overwhelmed. Keep this column handy and what ever you do, stay away from the sweaters. ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

OVERDOSING ON ART: NEW YORK STYLE
Part 11

It's just a short walk from SoHo's New Museum of Contemporary Art to the exhibit "Here is New York: Images From the Frontline of History" at 116 Prince Street. So that's where this critic headed next on a gallery - hopping marathon. The show was crowded, with both viewers and photographs competing for space. No matter. The presentation was an impressive installation bringing together known and unknown photographers and their images of New York after September 11.

Some pictures were by recognizable photojournalists like Gilles Peress and Edward Keating. Others featured dynamic images by "ordinary" people who documented a personal response to the World Trade Center tragedy. The point was clear: there was no "star system" operating – the subject matter became a shared, unfying, and democratic experience.

It was difficult to single out any particular photograph, each work distinguished itself in some way, the arrangement was overwhelming like the event itself. One was reminded of the Vietnam War Memorial's overpowering effect where the names of the dead go on and on.

Heading uptown to the Whitney Museum on Madison Avenue, the exhibit "Into the Light" featured another kind of history: works by artists who pioneered video/film installations. Most of the pieces were conceptual with multiple projections dating from 1964 to 1977.

"Here is New York" Exhibit

One intriguing example was Andy Warhol's Lupe, in which Edie Sedgwich acted out the final hours of Lupe Velez' suicide. The movie had been cut in half with both sides projected side -by-side.

Other exceptional experimental works included Bruce Nauman's "Spinning Spheres," where optical perception was explored. Vitto Acconci's 1974 "Other Voices for a Second Sight" was more complicated with its political theme and multiple sensory channels. Both audio and projected imagery filled three separate enclosed spaces, the piece questioning our loss of direction in Vietnam.

Joan Jonas' "Mirage" was also a fascinating multimedia piece, using performance (when it was originally done at the Anthology Film Archives) objects, drawings, film and video.

When we think of so-called advances in media technology, like digital and computer generated imagery, we can't help but appreciate these early innovators who did so much with so little resources.

"Into The Light" will be on view at the Whitney Museum until Jan. 27, 2002.

Honoring The Artist: Lynne Heffner Ferrante

HONORING THE ARTIST, NOV. 23, 2001: LYNNE HEFFNER FERRANTE

Just when you thought you knew all about artists' studios here in the Hamptons, you pay a visit to the home of Lynne Heffner Ferrante. It is not quite like any creative space we've seen so far: a contemporary structure resembling an old barn; at once a living quarters for the artist and her husband, a studio where colorful materials, unusual furniture, diverse boxes and odd-shaped canvases share a relatively small space. An adjoining storage area is a fleamarket collector's delight.

In fact, the entire setting is a delight, made especially so by Ms. Ferrante's own works, which are as colorful, unusual, and diverse as items elsewhere. We can't help but notice that flowers predominate in the form of wallpaper, paintings, tabletops and real blossoms. There are also recurring mirrors, fake gems, angels and other found objects. ("Some of which came form the dump," Ms. Ferrante says with glee. "Let's face it, I'm a dump junkie. When I'm feeling blue, I don't go to Bloomies, I go to the dump.")

Ms. Ferrante is an "eclectic," which by her own admittance sounds like a cliche, but we can't see anything cliched about her one-of-a-kind works, with varied media: assemblages, poured paint, collage over etchings and ceramics.

And where does the artist get all this inspiration from? Ms. Ferrante doesn't really know the answer to that one, but notes instead, "I just put out inspiration, and you can interprete it how you like."

While it is clear that Ms. Ferrante relies on her own boundless energy and resourcefulness, she does credit one person with providing inspiration early on. "Bruce Friedle, an outsider artist, set me on my path," she says with enthusiasm. (We can see why. Mr. Friedle's work, including a sculpture of Ms. Ferrante, and a lovely screen, are as unique as Ms. Ferrante's art.)

It doesn't seem possible that Ms. Ferrante could also have time for other projects besides her own art, but she does. As President of the Southampton Artists Association, she seems a commited and tireless advocate. Ms. Ferrante is just as energetic when talking about the Association as she is about her own creative projects.

"There has been a tremendous change in the Southampton Artists Association. We currently have five shows yearly, plus our annual high school competition show. We have recently had speaker presentations by Dan Weldon, David Porter and Mickey Paraskevas which were well attended and received. I have also initiated and implemented a "Moveable Feast of Art" Studio Open House Tour program and figure drawing workshops."

We especially like the term "Moveable Feast of Art." It certainly applies to Ms. Ferrante's own work as well.

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

Ms. Ferrante's works can be seen at The Inn at Quoque until Nov. 30; the cover photograph was taken by Alex Kabbaz. The Southampton Artists Association's annual Thanksgiving show will be Nov. 23 - 25 at Southampton's Cultural Center.

The Dan's Papers They Made The Movie Here Film Festival Fall 2001

COMING SATURDAY DECEMBER 1ST LONG ISLAND'S NORTH SHORE: RICH IN LOVE, CHARM AND MONEY

Enjoying the two posh, plump, generously airy and richly furnished with outdoorsiness Sabrina movies, one is shy to acknowledge their source to be the Broadway play Sabrina Fair. The 1954 film is black and white but manages as much colorful entertainment as Radio City's Christmas Show. Its star Audrey Hepburn gave out as much sparkling brilliance as all the Rockettes in a row. She is the Cinderella girl who lived above the garage and skullery, her parents being the chauffeur and cook to one of the wealthiest families in Glen Cove, L.I. Her nose was permanently pressed against the silver plate glass that separated her from the Tiffany life just beyond it. Then she comes to be pursued by not one but the two Princes...producing not one, but two of the most delightful romance movies of our social class system and, just plain class.

The second Sabrina, made in 1995, added color and an expanded plot that gives a Christmas feeling with the older brother, Linus, as a strictly-business guy who gets a wake up call by the bright, enlightening Sabrina, and finds a happier way of life following his Scrooge-like morning-after.

The remake replaces Humphrey Bogart with Harrison Ford as Linus in a near Oscar performance, Greg Kinnear in for William Holden, as the younger, very immature brother, David. Julia Ormond is a palpable Sabrina, reflecting Audrey's brilliance. Also expanded are the locations, but the opulently attractive Glen Cove still takes first place. Yes, even with Paris, very much on screen, where Sabrina learns gourmet cooking and gourmand chicness.

Sabrina, is a lush luv-of-a-movie (and get a load of the luxurious music) not to mention the lovely color of money. It's a Love Boat, dreamy cruise-like excursion for a pre-Christmas vacation. The Dream Boat sets sail Saturday December 1st at 2 p.m. at the Ross School Library, 18 Goodfriend Drive in East Hampton (first building on right). I, Guy-Jean de Fraumeni will be your Host and Recreation Director, assisted by Sarah Halsey and Reggie Woolery.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

For the lucky people who cook Thanksgiving dinner, the remains of the day can prove to be inspired creations, rather than holiday leftovers. I know, there is always the ubiquitous turkey sandwich, salad or soup. But have you made a turkey pot pie lately?

A couple of weeks ago we had the pleasure of seeing Alan Alda in his new play QED at the Vivian Beaumont Theatre at Lincoln Center. His electrifying performance portraying a day in the life of Richard Feynman, the idiosyncratic physicist of the California Institute of Technology, energized the audience in an engaging and timely production. Prior to the performance we dined at O'Neal's, a popular dining spot in the Lincoln Center vicinity. Much to my husband's delight they had chicken pot pie on the menu. "Now why don't more restaurants think about offering chicken potpie?" he exclaimed. So with my turkey leftovers this weekend I will prepare turkey potpie. There are sure to be lots of vegetable leftovers and so all I have to do is whip up a white sauce to bind the ingredients. You can top the pie with a pastry crust – store bought if you must, or even a layer of phyllo dough, and another hearty dish is born.

Mesclun comes from the Nicoise word mecla, meaning to mix and has become a household word. Accompany the potpie with an invigorating mix of greens. Garnish with sweet and spicy nuts and continue the Thanksgiving tradition through the weekend.

TURKEY POT PIE

Grown men love chicken potpie. It's warm and comforting and strikes a nostalgic chord. Why not make it this weekend with your turkey and vegetable leftovers. What a way to clean out the fridge! Serves 6

4 cups cut up roast turkey, light and dark meat
2 cups cooked or roasted mixed vegetables
1/2 cup cooked potato wedges, if available
1/4 cup chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

For the white sauce
3 tablespoons unsalted butter
3 tablespoons flour
2 1/2 cups hot chicken or turkey broth
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

For the crust top
1 sheet pastry dough to cover baking dish. Or 6 leaves of phyllo dough. If using pastry, brush top with egg wash, 1 yolk mixed with 1 teaspoon water. If using phyllo dough, lightly moisten each sheet with vegetable oil.

1. Trim turkey meat of skin or excess fat and discard fat. Put into a large bowl and mix with the vegetables, potatoes, if available and season with parsley, salt and pepper.
2. Make the white sauce: Melt butter in a 2-3 quart saucepan and add the flour all at once. Cook, stirring over low heat for 1-2 minutes to cook the raw taste of the flour. Add the hot broth all at once and stir continuously until the mixture thickens, about 7-8 minutes. Season to taste with salt and pepper and let cool.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees

3.Pour the white sauce over the meat and vegetables and carefully stir to distribute the ingredients evenly. Transfer to a lightly greased baking dish. Place a rolled out pastry dough about 1/8-inch thick) brushed with egg wash or layer six sheets of phyllo, moistening each sheet with a sprinkle of oil. Bake in preheated oven for 20-25 minutes until pastry or phyllo is golden brown.

RADICCHIO, ARUGULA AND ENDIVE SALAD

Long before mesclun became a household word, I taught my students to mix this invigorating medley of greens, simply dressed with a fruity extra-virgin olive oil and a pure red wine vinegar. When preparing a basic vinaigrette, proportions are approximately 3 parts oil to 1 part vinegar.
Serves 4-6

1 large head radicchio
1-2 bunches arugula
1-2 heads endive
2 shallots, finely chopped
1 - 2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
1 teaspoon coarse (kosher) salt
Freshly ground pepper to taste
3-6 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
Candied walnuts or pecans

1. Unfurl radicchio leaves, discarding any bruised outer layers. Remove and discard core. Cut off and discard heavy arugula stems. Wash greens and spin-dry. Wrap in paper towels to absorb excess moisture. Roll up and secure in zip-lock bags. Refrigerate until ready to use. For the salad I cut the endive into rings but do not wash, dry and cut until ready to toss with the greens.
2. Prepare dressing: Place chopped shallots in a mixing bowl. Measure out wine vinegar in a spoon with the salt and stir to mix in the bowl of the spoon with a fork. Mix with the shallots and season with freshly ground pepper. Gradually whisk in the olive oil until mixture is homogenous. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary.
3. Bring the greens to room temperature if refrigerated. Put them in a salad bowl and cut in the rings of endive. Pour the dressing over the greens and toss with abandon. Add candied nuts and serve at once.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

The Bellport
159 South County Road, Bellport
631-286-7550

Anyone who has eaten at The Bellport knows Patricia; no sooner does one enter the cozy and charming restaurant located on Bellport's South Country Road, than one is greeted by a tall flamboyantly dressed woman usually wearing a hat (tonight it's a tapestry pillbox) who escorts your party to a table while simultaneously delivering a welcoming monologue.

Patricia is Patricia Trainor, who, along with her husband, chef Taylor Alonso, bought The Bellport in 1990 and converted a one-time casual eatery into a gastronomic treasure.

Creativity is their hallmark; Alonso, a classically trained French chef, turns out an eclectic variety of sumptuous dishes which range from Indian to Caribbean to good old-fashioned Americana but always with his signature twist.

Trainor provides the style; she is solely responsible for the decor which could be described as falling midway between funky and sophisticated. Hand-painted tables with mismatched antique wrought iron chairs, fresh and dried flowers and vines, beautiful oil paintings by local artists Mary Reay and Malcolm Morley combine to create a comfortable but visually stimulating atmosphere.

Patricia Trainor and Taylor Alonso

We sat in the west porch room where a blazing fire in the antique wood stove kept the room comfortable on one of this year's colder autumn evenings. (The east porch room was once attached to Daley's Dandelion, a popular 1st Avenue restaurant, which was transplanted piece by piece to the Bellport site). Windows abound with views of Bellport's quaint main street. Light jazz and the sounds of a French chanteuse provide pleasant background music.

The Bellport presents a seasonal menu with daily specials. For our appetizer, we began with the corn-crusted oysters, delicately fried, served with a fresh corn sauce. Tender and sweet, the oysters literally melted in your mouth. We also tried a medley of other first courses. The French Caribbean chowder with crawfish was zesty but did not overpower the subtle flavors of the fish. The shrimp tandoori served in a spicy curry sauce demonstrated Taylor's mastery of Indian cuisine; I could have happily enjoyed it as a main course.

Made with a corn crust, The Bellport pizza boasted homemade mozzarella and fresh tomato-vegetable sauce sprinkled with fresh herbs. (Patricia proudly explains that Taylor makes everything himself: his own mozzarella, his own bread and desserts, even his own ketchup!) But the piece de resistance of appetizers was the signature Bellport crabcake, made of all jumbo lump crabmeat. Lightly fried, it was sweet, tender and delicious – crabcake-lovers' heaven.

Reeling from the appetizers, we were given a few minutes to relax before the main courses were served. The service was attentive yet relaxed and informal. We were well-taken care of by our waitress Emily and our busboy Justin. The pace of the meal was relaxed allowing plenty of time for conversation and to savor each course.

We were able to sample four entrees, all quite different, all delicious. The first was a sauteed fillet of blackfish with a horseradish crust served on a salsa fresca. For those of you who haven't eaten blackfish, it is a firm white fleshed mild-flavored fish indigenous to Long Island waters. In fact, Taylor makes a point of using local fish and produce whenever possible. This dish was served on a salsa of finely chopped fresh vegetables in a delicate sauce with a touch of mustard. Moist and flavorful, this was a definite pick of the evening. We also tried the marinated Angus ribeye served with a zesty green onion chutney. Tender and savory, the meat was particularly good eaten with the sharp chutney. Different and delicious.

For those looking for a more traditional meal, the "Good Old Buttermilk" fried chicken breast with mushroom fricassee served with mashed potatoes was no disappointment. Comfort food for the news-weary soul. And the last entree (one that we can't wait to enjoy a second time!) was the barbecued pork pot roast. Made from a loin of pork, it was slow cooked in Taylor's own barbecue sauce which is quite different from any I've ever tasted. The flavors just burst on the tongue, the most noticeable being a touch of ginger. His secret ingredient? A dash of espresso added just at the end. "While you don't taste the coffee flavor, it really brings out the flavor of the other spices," he told us. This tender and succulent meat is served with parsnip chips (out of this world!) and fruit salsa consisting of dried apricots, cranberries and raisins. Fabulous.

The grand finale, dessert, was indeed grand. To put it simply, my husband John said, "This is the best chocolate dessert I've ever had," and I can attest to the fact that he's tried quite a few. This one, called Molten Chocolate Cake was an individual cake baked so that the outside was cake-like while the inside was indeed "molten." The quality of the chocolate was superior; the cake was delicious but not cloyingly sweet. Served with a light scoop of ice cream on a plate embellished with chocolate sauce, it was a dessert to fantasize about...at least, until our next visit!

The food, the presentation, the atmosphere all worked together to make this a memorable meal. Expressing our delight to Patricia, she responded, "I love superlatives." At The Bellport, they are well deserved.

The Bellport is located at 159 South Country Road. Closed on Tuesdays (except during the height of the summer) the hours are Mon., Wed. and Thurs. from 5:30-10 p.m. Fri. from 5:30-11 p.m. Sat. 12-3 for lunch, 5:30-11 for dinner. Sun. 12-9. Reservations are appreciated: 631 286-7550. Appetizers/soups/salads range from $5 to $10.50; Entrees and pastas from $13.75 to $24; Desserts are $6.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

Side Dish
By Aji Jones

Hey, remember we told you last week we'd have some news about 95 School Street? Well, The Dish is ready to spill: they've got a new chef – Chris Polidoro. Polidoro, a CIA graduate, comes from the local kitchens of Nick & Toni's, The Laundry and Yama Q. He also spent time as an organic farmer learning the benefits of organic produce and its uses in cooking.

More of the East End's esteemed chefs can be found at the annual Great Chefs of Long Island benefit on December 2. At this fundraiser for the family service league, you'll find food from Almond Bar & Restaurant, George Martin, red/bar, Star Room and others. It'll be held at the Crest Hollow Country Club in Woodbury from 2-5 p.m. and you can get tickets by calling 631-427-3700.

Here's the TV buzz: Joseph Plays With Food will air their next segment on what to do with all those Thanksgiving leftovers. The guest chef will be Seth Caswell, chef de cuisine from Nick & Toni's in East Hampton, one of the Hamptons' most high profile eateries. The Leftover Fun segment airs Friday, November 23 at 6:30 p.m. and again on Tuesday, November 27 at 6:30 p.m.

Speaking of movies, we heard that Steven Spielberg and family are back in town for the holidays... no doubt they'll be thrilled to find out that their favorite haunt, Nick & Toni's, now offers catering. The restaurant is available for private parties up to 150 people, or they'll bring it to you. Executive chef, Joe Realmuto can customize a menu to fit specific needs. For the holiday season, three different dining menus have been created at $25, $40 and $60 per person. There is also a list of over 50 hors d'oeuvres to choose from. Call Kirsten LaBue at Nick & Toni's for inquiries 631-324-3550.

Another cool holiday party spot is Almond Bar & Restaurant in Bridgehampton (537-8885). They've let us know they're all ready for their first holiday season and can host parties in their private room for six to sixty guests - or close the entire restaurant for parties of up to one hundred. They'll create a special menu to accommodate any budget and taste.

The Eighth Annual Community Tree Lighting at the Maidstone Arms is on Friday, December 7 at 6:30 p.m. A thirty-five foot blue spruce tree will be lit and holiday treats will be offered until 8 p.m. Bring unwrapped gifts for donation to the Kiwanis Club's Toys For Tots program. There will be live music courtesy of the East Hampton High School Choral Group and Bradley Beyer. Town Crier Hugh King will make a special appearance. After the tree lighting, The Maidstone Arms will host a three-course dinner with matching wines provided by Wines by Morrell. The dinner is $75, of which $55 will directly go to the Children's Museum of the East End. For further information and dinner reservations, call The Maidstone Arms at 631-324-5006.

Getting Back To Our Roots

Late autumn is the season of the harvest. This is the time that we reap all we have sown. It can also be time to plant new gardens within ourselves, get the house in order, turn on the heat and light the fireplace. It is the season when we want to stay in our pajamas with a blanket and a good book. Even though most of us can't do that, we can get the most out of these months as we get ourselves ready for the coming winter. As we move towards longer nights and colder weather we can cultivate a healthy winter body and a full and joyful heart.

The diet of autumn is designed around grains, fresh fruits and vegetables served raw or lightly steamed. The best vegetables at this time of year are root vegetables – radishes, carrots, parsnips, beets, onions, garlic and turnips – because they are great heat producers. They start the body's fire and help keep us warm. Grains will give you the deep physical foundation needed for cold weather. Additional benefits are that these foods are loaded with fiber that will keep your body clean and pure and they will also help build a disease resistant body. Don't forget to drink at least six to eight glasses of water a day. As your body rids itself of toxins you will feel healthier, stronger and more vital than you have in years.

We need more rest at this time of year. If we followed our natural clock during this season we would go to sleep earlier and wake up later. Most of us need to be up and out at an early hour, however, to compensate for this necessity we can go to bed earlier. A few weeks on this regimen and you will be at the top of your game, because rest is so important in building a healthy, strong body.

Just because the weather is getting colder it doesn't mean you can forget your exercise program. If you do not have one, start one now. Begin walking outdoors every day. Start with fifteen minutes and build slowly to about forty-five minutes to an hour daily. You will feel great and you will have much more vitality. Try not to be negative, no matter how long it has been since you last exercised. Start now and remember, all good health starts with one step.

This is also a good time to work on the spiritual principal of gratitude. Being grateful and speaking thanksgiving words is another sure way to improve your health and life situation from the inside out because gratitude makes for a full and joyful heart. It lifts depression and melancholy so that you will look at life with a new and more open vision. Gratitude refreshes as it creates a new spirit in you and thoughts of gratitude show us how much we have been given. The beauty and riches of the earth are all ours, the love of our friends and family overflows into our lives every day. We all have many blessing to be thankful for each day. As hard as it is, give thanks for your biggest challenges for these are usually your best lessons. Gratitude brings us humility and it makes us feel prosperous, generous and satisfied. If you want to feel great and get more and more out of life, practicing gratitude is the best way to go.

Your thoughts and feelings have so much to do with how your body performs. Being grateful acknowledges the presence of the good in your life, which in turn becomes a magnet for more health, abundance, love and beauty. If you are feeling the presence of lack and limitation in your life, begin now to be grateful for what you have. Look toward the positives in your life and you are sure to attract more. Be grateful for at least four things present in your life and continue to do this exercise daily for two weeks. You'll see the difference in your life.

Our Southampton Hospital... High Tech Additions

Southampton Hospital is committed to provide our patients and their physicians an ever-expanding array of the most advanced medical technology available today. Over the previous eighteen months, several remarkable pieces of equipment have been added and this has raised the level of both diagnostic procedures and treatment modalities for our community.

The most technologically advanced CT scanner, a GE LightSpeed Plus, can provide an image of the body from head to pelvis in one minute. The open architecture of this scanner has proven much more comfortable to patients who have problems with enclosed scanners. Two features of this technology are first, an ability to diagnose internal disease, and secondly, the ability to predict a patient's risk of a future heart attack. Having your body scanned to look into the future is here now, in the present, at Southampton Hospital.

The intermediate cardiac care unit is another example of the hospital's forward looking approach to medicine. This new addition provides a higher level of monitoring for cardiac patients through wireless telemetry. What this means is each patient in this unit has their heart functions monitored and reported though radio signals to a central point at the nurses' station where the patients cardiac functions can be viewed. The patient does not have to be in their room or in their bed for this monitoring. Each nurse in this unit wears a beeper and may monitor up to five patients. If irregular activity is sensed by the monitors, the beeper sounds and the nurse is able to view the patients heart rhythm immediately on her beeper. This unit is staffed by sixteen nurses specifically trained in this technology who, like the entire staff of nurses, have a most highly skilled and enthusiastic approach to this state of the art telemetric unit and its patients.

Colorectal screening at Southampton Hospital is also on the technologic edge. A newly expanded Endoscopy Suite utilizes advanced Olympus endoscopes for those patients undergoing colonoscopies and upper endoscopies. This screening equipment aids in the detection and evaluation of gastrointestinal conditions and diseases, including colorectal cancer. Biopsy and removal of polyps can be accomplished during the screening due to the excellent imaging.

Another high tech acquisition is the LORAD MultiCare Stereotactic Breast Biopsy System. This marvelous machine uses a computer to map the precise site of a breast abnormality before a tissue biopsy is done. This mapping allows the physician to precisely locate the area. A much smaller incision is needed and therefore shortens procedure time, healing time, and decreases tissue trauma. The equipment allows the woman to be in a prone position during evaluation.

As you can see, Southampton Hospital has taken great strides in bringing some of the most advanced equipment here for the benefit of our community. There is no longer a need to travel to search for advanced technology or for the highly trained and personal approach to medicine that Southampton Hospital and is staff provides. – Dr. Maurice D. Goldman

POLICE BLOTTER

The bubbly bandits were back in action last week, this time after the more velvety vino. An East Hampton resident on Longwoods Lane called police to report that someone broke and entered through a basement window before making off with 12 cases of wine. This wasn't a bag-in-a-box affair... the owner valued the wine at $12,000. He also told police the intruders had taken $200 from an up-stairs bedroom.

Disturbed and fearful of his dog's life, an East Hampton man called police last week to report a threat from an unknown neighbor. The man discovered a threatening note under the windshield wiper of his car and a bowl of pet food spiced up with some rat poison next to it. The sick-minded sinner also stooped so low as to slash all of the car's tires. The man told police that neighbors have complained before about his overly vocal dog, but no one has ever made such serious threats.

Due to the chilly November nights upon us, Anthony Padetta became a victim last Saturday at his Bridgehampton home. Police reported that someone dismantled the steps leading to the beach behind his house. The goose-pimpled perpetrator(s) then built a fire using the wood. Police have no suspects and arrived too late for marshmallows.

Southampton Village Police were involved in a minor car chase last week culminating in the arrest of a 22-year-old Southampton man. After police tried to pull the man over for a traffic violation, he began to flee, but was soon apprehended and taken into custody. Damaging two patrol cars and causing quite a stir, the motorist was charged with reckless endangerment in the second degree, reckless driving and criminal mischief in the second degree.

Why'd the chicken cross the road?

To escape the little white dog who slaughtered the rest of the flock, of course. An employee of the Hampton Day School on Butter Lane called police last Sunday after discovering a small, white dog had killed several chickens in the school's yard. She was able to capture the dog and call Animal Control, but had no clue who the mutt belonged to. She told police she would sign a complaint for the loss of the $5 birds if the owner of the dog was found.

A Montauk woman was alarmed by a package she received last week, fearing it may contain Anthrax. The package arrived at her Navy Road residence with writings of "re-packaged" and "received damaged" on it and with a return address in New Jersey. By the time police arrived she had remembered ordering a pair of shoes. And to make matters worse, they were the wrong size. Damn terrorists...

A late-season surfcaster was assaulted in Sag Harbor last week. Terry Sullivan of Richards Drive was fishing at Sagg Main Beach when a man approached and told him he couldn't fish there because of a wedding that was to take place that afternoon. When Sullivan continued for a few more casts, the bridegroom, Jason Brunner of Bayview Road, became enraged enough to kick him in the ribs. If you've ever experienced the stress of preparing for a wedding, you know that kicking someone in the mid-section will relieve most of it. Maybe Mr. Sullivan was nice enough to acknowledge that, because he told police a simple apology would replace the hassle of pressing charges.

A SAD DAY ON MAIN STREET
Dear Dan,

The enclosed drawing was Tyler Hannibal's artistic response as to how he felt about the cutting down of the huge tree on Montauk Highway in East Hampton. As his art teacher, I believe the emotion expressed is one we all feel and is worthy of publication. Thank you.

GETTING THE BOOT
Dear Dan,

Your article on The Car Boot Mess is right on target. The East Hampton Chamber has written to the three landlords in question, asking them to find a better solution to their private lot parking problems. We explained to them that booting has been a public relations nightmare and would have a negative impact on village shopping. Not one landlord agreed to find a better way.

East Hampton is noted for being one of the most beautiful and charming villages in America, however it loses its charm when cars are booted and negative publicity ensues.

BEASTS UNBURDENED
Dear Dan,

I read with great interest your article on Blessing the Animals at St. Luke's in your October 12 issue. While it was an informative article, I thought I would give you one or two details that you may not have been aware.

We always offer this special service on the Sunday following St. Francis Day, which is on October 4. As your readers no doubt remember, St. Francis of Assisi totally removed all material value and devoted himself to serve the poor and God's feathered and furry creatures.

During the past four years, our neighbors at the Mulford Farm have joined us in this special service and have opened the farm grounds for browsing and feeding after the service at St. Luke's.

I hope you, Spalding and Moo will return to St. Luke's next October for a double blessing. By the way, in attendance on October 7 were 210 pets and 309 pet owners.
